Clyde Romig Dies; Retired Aide at CIA

Clyde Edison Romig, 76, a retired personnel officer with the Central Intelligence Agency, died of cancer Oct. 25 at Alexandria Hospital. He lived in Alexandria.

Mr. Romig was born in Ohio and grew up in Washington. He graduated from the old Central High School and George Washington University, where he also received a law degree.

He joined the Treasury Department in 1934 and transferred to the Civil Service Commission about 1937. In 1946, he was appointed the Veterans Administration's personnel director for the Philippines, where he worked for three years. He came back to the United States in 1949.

In 1950, he moved to Baltimore to rejoin the Civil Service Commission. He returned to Washington and went to work for the CIA in 1952. He retired in 1969. From the early 1950 until his death, he also was a manager in the Washington offices of the Whiteacker Coal Co., a Clarksburg, W.Va., coal firm.

Mr. Romig was a founding member of the Beverly Hills Community Church in Alexandria. He was a member of the Fairfax and Mount Vernon country clubs.

Survivors include his wife, the former Margaret Sperry of Alexandria; a daughter, Anne Decker of Potomac; a son, Sperry Romig of Lansdale, Pa.; a brother, Thomas, of Jackson, Miss., and Tucson, and four grandchildren.
